Relaxing Refuge

In the cigar room, walls upholstered with tufted and accented with halfwood trim suggest a gentleman's club, a gateway from today's hectic pace. The placement of the contemporary jet black lounge offers, reminiscent of the style of Jean-Michel Frank, encourages after-dinner conversation around a low cocktail table. A fine cigar and a smooth cognac or brandy are available in nearby laboratory.

An oversized area rug ties together the seating area. The unexpected blue of the fabric lightens the area, jet canopy offers a subtle touch. The blue, repeated on the ceiling, provides serenity, making this a perfect spot for reading a favorite book. The calm refuge prepares one for enjoying life's many adventures.

McCreary focuses, thanks to Corey McCreary in 1997, operations in residential and light commercial design. Projects include full-scale renovations, restorations, and existing finishing touches. McCreary focuses on a team that is creative, writing and explaining a finished contemporary look. Incorporating wood, metal, glass, and natural fibers, creating building elements with strong profiles of color impart a strong effect. The wood line often sets about ground elevation.

PHOTOGRAPHY & ARCHITECTURE: McCreary worked with John Ross Design Group in Miami and worked as an interior designer at William Howard Design House, International Fine Art College, Miami.
